How to Cut Your Financial Bread Loaf: A Basic Budgeting Guide by Ashleigh Johnston on December 11, 2018 No one wants to be in debt. In fact, it's estimated that a staggering three-quarters of the adult population in the U.S. has some form of debt, which means that it's a common issue for many people. The only way to get out of debt is to adopt a budgeting strategy. Most people don't realize the advantages of budgeting until they hit a rough patch and must resort to it. If you're looking to cut your financial breadloaf, you'll find a few of the top tips below. Create a Balanced Budget While it's normal to have a few bills you're unable to pay, it's important to prioritize the areas of your budget where you can cut. Whether you need to consolidate bills, pay down your credit card debt or start saving for retirement, you need to address where you can make cuts in order to successfully solve your debt problems. To get started, keep a list of the monthly bills that you're not in the habit of paying and focus on those. Determine Your Monthly Expenses Every month, you're asked to list your monthly expenses. This is a great way of helping you stay on track with your budget and to find where you can cut back. Make sure to include everything you spend on a monthly basis. This includes: Household bills Utilities Car loan Rent Entertainment and other fun expenses As you can see, this list is pretty broad, which is why you need to be sure to prioritize and cut out items that aren't necessary. If you're still unsure of how much you should be spending on each item, there are a few calculators you can use online. Know How to Build Credit Credit is more than a word 82157476af
